

ABSTRACT

A system and method for analyzing financial markets and securities. The method involves graphing the performance of a security relative to a benchmark, such as the overall 5 market. In order to screen out anomalous performance data, the method preferably uses data based on moving or rolling averages. Statistical calculations are performed on the benchmark data in order to depict the normal range of performance for the benchmark over time.